I do feel that making all tech's and tech pluses general class is very wrong. I understand everyone is hoping you drop the code requirements. I feel this is wrong but going to happen. When I took my general license test I had to study for quite some time, not near as easy as the tech license. These people have earned an entry level license let them keep an entry level license. This should make everyone happy.